

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT TACOMA

K.H., et al.,

Plaintiffs,

V.

OLYMPIA SCHOOL DISTRICT, et al.,

Defendants.

CASE NO. C16-5507 BHS

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS

This matter comes before the Court on the motion to dismiss (Dkt. 12) of Olympia

School District, Frederick Stanley, Barbara Greer, and William Lahmann (“Defendants”)

and the motion to strike (Dkt. 20) by K.H. and G.H. (“Plaintiffs”). The Court has considered the pleadings filed in support of and in opposition to the motions and the remainder of the file and hereby grants the motions for the reasons stated herein.

1. BACKGROUND

On June 25, 2014, Plaintiffs filed a complaint in Thurston County Superior Court against Olympia School District in K.H. v. Olympia School District, No. 14-2-01243-5 (“K.H. I”). Dkt. 13-1. The complaint stated a claim for negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress based on the conduct of Olympia School District’s employees. Dkt.

1 13-1 at 10–13. In setting forth the misdeeds of Olympia School District’s employees, the 2 complaint specifically named Fredrick Stanley, Barbara Greer, and William Lahmann as 3 bad actors. Dkt. 13-1 at 5, 8–9.

4 On November 30, 2015, the case proceeded to trial. Dkt. 13-2 at 3. On December 5 17, 2015 the jury returned a verdict finding that Olympia School district was negligent 6 and grossly negligent, but awarding no damages. Id. at 3–4. On January 21, 2016, the 7 Thurston County Superior Court entered judgment for Olympia School District and 8 granted costs. Id. On February 10, 2016, Plaintiffs filed a notice of appeal. Dkt. 13-3. The 9 appeal is currently pending. Dkt. 14 at 5.

10 On June 1, 2016, Plaintiffs filed their present complaint. Dkt. 1. Like the 11 complaint in Thurston County Superior Court, the complaint names Olympia School 12 District as a defendant. Id. The complaint also names Fredrick Stanley, Barbara Greer, 13 and William Lahmann as defendants in their individual capacity. Id. In their present 14 complaint, Plaintiffs do not allege negligence. Id. Instead, they allege that the misconduct 15 of the individually named defendants constituted deliberate indifference rising to the 16 level of a constitutional deprivation and an actionable violation under 20 U.S.C. § 17 1681(a). Id. at 21–23.

18 On July 21, 2016, Defendants filed a motion to dismiss. Dkt. 12. On August 8, 19 2016, Plaintiffs responded. Dkt. 14. On August 12, 2016, Defendants replied. Dkt. 16. On 20 August 18, 2016, Plaintiffs filed a surreply, requesting that the Court strike portions of a 21 declaration submitted by Defendant’s counsel in support of their reply. Dkt. 20.

II. DISCUSSIONA. Motion to Strike

Plaintiffs move to strike portions of the second Declaration of Michael McFarland (Dkt. 17) insofar as it refers to statements the jurors made to the declarant after rendering a verdict in K.H. I. Dkt. 20. The Court agrees that such information is inadmissible hearsay and there is no indication that Defendants could present the information in an admissible form. Fed. R. Evid. 801 and 802. More importantly, such information is well outside either the present pleadings or the record of K.H. I upon which Defendants base their res judicata defense. The court may not consider such information on a motion to dismiss. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d). In any case, the only purpose of these statements is to counter Plaintiffs' argument that the jury's verdict is unlawfully inconsistent, which has no relation on the present motion based on res judicata. See Fed. R. Evid. 401 and 402. Accordingly, the Court grants Plaintiffs' motion to strike and will not consider any of the contested evidence as set forth in Plaintiffs' motion.

B. 12(b)(6) Standard

Plaintiffs argue that the motion should be treated as a motion for summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a) and point to Defendants' failure to state the applicable rule whereby they brought their motion or the appropriate legal standard. Defendants failed to reply to this argument. Although Defendants' failure to cite either the legal authority enabling their motion or the applicable standard is conspicuous, the motion is titled "Motion to Dismiss" and not "Motion for Summary Judgment." Accordingly, the Court will treat the motion as if it were intended as a motion to dismiss

1 pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), as opposed to a motion for summary judgment
2 pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

3 To survive a motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), a complaint must 4 plead sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim for relief that is plausible
5 on its face. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). A Court may dismiss a claim 6 based on the lack of a cognizable legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts to support 7 a cognizable legal theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir.
8 1988). For the purposes of the motion, the Court reads material allegations in the 9 complaint as admitted and the complaint is construed in Plaintiffs' favor. Keniston v.
10 Roberts, 717 F.2d 1295 (9th Cir. 1983).

11 C. Judicial Notice on a Motion to Dismiss

12 Generally, a court may not consider matters outside the pleadings in deciding a 13 motion to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d). Doing so requires 14 treating the motion as a request for summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Id.
15 However, “a court may take judicial notice of matters of public record without converting 16 a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment” Skilstaf, Inc. v. CVS 17 Caremark Corp., 669 F.3d 1005, 1016 n. 9 (9th Cir. 2012) (citation and internal quotation 18 marks omitted). “On a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, when a court takes judicial notice 19 of another court’s opinion, it may do so ‘not for the truth of the facts recited therein, but 20 for the existence of the opinion, which is not subject to reasonable dispute over its 21 authenticity.’” Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 690 (9th Cir. 2001) (quoting

1 | Southern Cross Overseas Agencies, Inc. v. Wah Kwong Shipping Group Ltd., 181 F.3d
2 | 410, 426–27 (3rd Cir. 1999)).

3 Defendants have failed to request that the Court take judicial notice of the 4 documents attached to their motion. They have likewise failed to cite a legal rule 5 authorizing the Court to do so on a motion to dismiss. Nonetheless, Defendants' failure 6 does not prevent the Court from taking judicial notice of the public records attached to 7 Defendants' motion. See e.g. Callan v. New York Cmty. Bank, 643 Fed. Appx. 666– 8 67 (9th Cir. 2016) (“The district court did not abuse its discretion in sua sponte taking 9 judicial notice of [Plaintiff]’s complaint . . . and the resulting judgment in [her] state court 10 action and considering these documents in ruling on the motion to dismiss.”) (citing Fed.
11 R. Evid. 201(c), (d)) (a court “may take judicial notice on its own” at any stage of the 12 proceeding); Reyn’s Pasta Bella, LLC v. Visa USA, Inc., 442 F.3d 741, 746 n. 6 (9th Cir.
13 2006) (courts “may take judicial notice of court filings and other matters of public 14 record”).

15 The documents attached to Defendants' motion (Dkts. 13-1, 13-2, 13-3) are public 16 records taken from the parties' prior proceeding in K.H. I. There has been no showing 17 that the authenticity of those documents or the information contained therein is subject to 18 reasonable dispute. See Intri-Plex Techs., Inc. v. Crest Grp., Inc., 499 F.3d 1048, 1052 19 (9th Cir. 2007). Accordingly, the Court takes judicial notice of the documents attached to 20 Defendants' motion.

1 D. Res Judicata

2 Defendants argue that the complaint should be dismissed under the doctrine of res 3 judicata. The law “require[s] all federal courts to give preclusive effect to state-court 4 judgments whenever the courts of the State from which the judgments emerged would do 5 so.” Allen v. McCurry, 449 U.S. 90, 96 (1980) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1738). Accordingly, 6 where state preclusion requirements are satisfied, “[r]es judicata applies to Section 1983 7 actions.” Sewer Alert Comm. v. Pierce Cty., 791 F.2d 796, 798 (9th Cir. 1986) (citing 8 Allen, 449 U.S. at 105). The Court must give the parties’ prior proceeding in Thurston 9 County Superior Court the same full faith and credit that Washington courts would give 10 it. Id.

11 Washington State preclusion law prohibits a party from filing separate lawsuits 12 with different claims that are based on the same events. Ensley v. Pitcher, 152 Wn. App.
 13 891, 898 (2009).

14 The doctrine of res judicata rests upon the ground that a matter 15 which has been litigated, or on which there has been an opportunity to 16 litigate, in a former action in a court of competent jurisdiction, should not 17 be permitted to be litigated again. It puts an end to strife, produces certainty 18 as to individual rights, and gives dignity and respect to judicial 19 proceedings.

20 Marino Prop. Co. v. Port Comm’rs of Port of Seattle, 97 Wn.2d 307, 312 (1982) (quoting 21 Walsh v. Wolff, 32 Wn.2d 285, 287 (1949)). To determine whether a previous lawsuit 22 justifies invoking res judicata, the threshold requirement is a final judgment on the 23 merits. Ensley, 152 Wn. App. at 899. In addition, Washington courts require identity 24 between a prior judgment and a subsequent action as to (1) persons and parties, (2) causes 25

1 of action, (3) subject matter, and (4) the quality of the persons for or against whom the 2 claim is made. Karlberg v. Otten, 167 Wn. App. 522, 536 (2012). The party asserting res 3 judicata as a defense has the burden of proving that the claim was previously adjudicated.
 4 Ensley, 152 Wn. App. at 902; Civil Serv. Comm'n of City of Kelso v. City of Kelso, 137
 5 Wn.2d 166, 172 (1999); Karim-Panahi v. L.A. Police Dep't, 839 F.2d 621, 627 n. 4 (9th 6 Cir. 1988).

7 1. Final Judgment

8 Defendants have presented the Court with the K.H. I judgment. Dkt. 13-2.

9 Plaintiffs argue that the K.H. I judgment is not final because the jury verdict is the subject 10 of a pending appeal. Dkt. 14 at 20. “The federal rule on the preclusive effect of a 11 judgment from which an appeal has been taken is that the pendency of an appeal does not 12 suspend the operation of an otherwise final judgment for purposes of res judicata.”

13 Eichman v. Fotomat Corp., 759 F.2d 1434, 1439 (9th Cir. 1985) (citing 1B J. Moore, J.
 14 Lucas, & T. Currier, Moore’s Federal Practice ¶ 0.416[3] at 521 (2d ed. 1983)). Under 15 Washington law, a judgment entered by a superior court is likewise preclusive during the 16 pendency of appeal. Nielson By & Through Nielson v. Spanaway Gen. Med. Clinic, Inc., 17 85 Wn. App. 249, 254 (1997), aff’d, 135 Wn.2d 255 (1998) (“[A]n appeal does not 18 suspend or negate the res judicata aspects of a judgment entered after trial in the superior 19 courts.”) (quoting Riblet v. Ideal Cement Co., 57 Wn.2d 619, 621 (1961)). See also 20 Lejeune v. Clallam Cty., 64 Wn. App. 257, 266 (1992) (“[A] judgment . . . becomes final 21 for res judicata purposes at the beginning, not the end, of the appellate process, although 22 res judicata can still be defeated by later rulings on appeal.”); City of Des Moines v. Pers.

1 Prop. Identified as $81,231 in U.S. Currency, 87 Wn. App. 689, 703 (1997) (“[W]here a 2 party has had a full opportunity to be heard . . . the trial court’s judgment is 3 presumptively correct and collateral estoppel [and res judicata] appl[y] even if an appeal 4 is pending.”). Based on the foregoing, the Court finds that the judgment presented by 5 Defendants constitutes a final judgment for the purpose of res judicata.

6 2. Identities and Quality of Persons and Parties

7 The parties do not dispute that Olympia School District was a party in K.H. I. See 8 Dkt. 13-1. Therefore, the Court finds that the identity of parties requirement is satisfied as 9 to Plaintiffs’ claims against Olympia School District.

10 Defendants also argue that the individually named defendants were in privity with 11 the School District as its employees. Plaintiffs argue that the K.H. I judgment does not 12 bar their current action because the individual employees were not named parties in K.H.
 13 I. Moreover, Plaintiffs argue that even if the judgment in K.H. I bars claims against the 14 individual defendants in their official capacity, it does not bar claims against them in their 15 individual capacity. Dkt. 14 at 15–16.

16 In Washington, “[d]ifferent defendants constitute the same party for res judicata 17 purposes if they are in privity. A nonparty is in privity with a party if that party 18 adequately represented the nonparty’s interest in the prior proceeding.” Feature Realty, 19 Inc. v. Kirkpatrick & Lockhart Preston Gates Ellis, LLP, 161 Wn.2d 214, 224 (2007) 20 (internal citation omitted). Privity exists between employer and employee when the 21 employer’s “liability in the first complaint . . . was premised entirely on the actions of its 22 employees.” Kuhlman v. Thomas, 78 Wn. App. 115, 121–22 (1995).

1 The Court agrees with the reasoning of the Eighth Circuit in Headley v. Bacon, 2 828 F.2d 1272, 1279 (8th Cir. 1987), upon which Plaintiffs rely to argue that the K.H. I 3 judgment should not foreclose actions against the individual employees in their personal 4 capacity. Dkt. 14 at 15–26. See Headley, 828 F.2d at 1279 (“[L]itigation involving 5 officials in their official capacity does not preclude relitigation in their personal 6 capacity.”). See also Wright, Miller & Cooper, 18A Fed. Prac. & Proc. Juris. § 4454 (2d 7 ed.) (“[L]itigation in one capacity, individual or representative, does not preclude 8 relitigation in a different capacity, individual or representative.”). However, as stated 9 above, 28 U.S.C. § 1738 mandates that the Court follow Washington law, not the law of 10 the Eighth Circuit, in evaluating the preclusive effect of the K.H. I judgment. Allen, 449 11 U.S. at 96. Under Washington law, “[i]n general, the employer/employee relationship is 12 sufficient to establish privity.” Emeson v. Dep’t of Corr., 194 Wn. App. 617, 636 (2016) 13 (quoting Kuhlman, 78 Wn. App. at 121).

14 The Court’s analysis under this general rule is complicated by the fact that in 15 deciding Kuhlman, the Washington Court of Appeals for Division One relied upon 16 federal law. 78 Wn. App. at 121. However, instead of citing the Eighth Circuit’s decision 17 in Headley, the Kuhlman decision cited the analysis of the Fifth Circuit in Lubrizol Corp.
18 v. Exxon Corp., 871 F.2d 1279, 1288 (5th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 864 (1992).
19 Kuhlman, 78 Wn. App. at 121. In looking to Lubrizol for guidance, the Kuhlman decision 20 asked whether “there was a ‘special relationship’ between the defendants in each action, 21 if not complete identity of parties.” Id. (quoting Lubrizol, 871 F.2d at 1288).
22 Accordingly, when determining whether Washington’s general rule applies, the Court

1 must assess whether (1) there was a “special relationship” between the parties, id.; (2) 2 whether Olympia School District’s “liability in the first complaint . . . was premised 3 entirely on the actions of its employees”, id. at 121–22; and (3) whether Olympia School 4 District “adequately represented [its employees’] interests in the prior proceeding.” Id. at 5 122.

6 The Court finds that the employment relationship between Olympia School 7 District and the individually named employees is sufficient to implicate a “special 8 relationship.”

9 Additionally, Olympia School District’s liability in K.H. I was premised entirely 10 on the actions of its employees. The complaint in K.H. I alleged that the District was 11 negligent “through its employees” in failing to protect Plaintiffs from a sexual predator.
12 Dkt. 13-1 at 12. In fact, the complaint in K.H. I specifically named defendants Fredrick 13 Stanley, Barbara Greer, and William Lahmann as bad actors and described how their 14 individual conduct and failure to adequately supervise bus drivers resulted in the 15 horrendous circumstances of D.H.’s abuse. Dkt. 13-1 at 5, 8–9. The present complaint 16 offers additional quotes from the individually named defendants and describes their 17 misdeeds in greater detail than the complaint in K.H. I, but the misconduct described is 18 nonetheless the same. Compare Dkt. 1 with Dkt. 13-1.

19 Olympia School District also adequately represented the interests of the 20 individually named employees while litigating K.H. I. The nature of the claims and the 21 relationship of the parties in K.H. I necessarily required as much. This is supported by 22 Plaintiffs’ statement that Olympia School District avoided liability in K.H. I by 1 “focus[ing] all its energy in maintaining that [the perpetrator of D.H.’s abuse] was the 2 party to blame and that nothing about it [sic] supervision was negligent.” Dkt. 14 at 15 3 (emphasis added). Olympia School District adequately represented the interests of its 4 employees when it successfully asserted that its supervision of bus drivers, the individual 5 defendants’ alleged responsibility, was not the cause of Plaintiffs’ harm or damages.

6 Plaintiffs also rely on Brown v. Scott Paper Worldwide Co., 98 Wn. App. 349
 7 (1999), aff’d, 143 Wn.2d 349 (2001), to argue that privity does not exist where a plaintiff 8 asserts personal liability against individually named employees in a subsequent action.
 9 Dkt. 14 at 15. However, central to Brown was the fact that the initial cause of action 10 under the Washington Law Against Discrimination, RCW 49.60, offered the employer 11 statutory “liability escape hatches” in relation to the wrongful conduct of the employees 12 subsequently named as individual defendants. 98 Wn. App. at 364–65. Therefore, a 13 defense was available to the employer that was not available to the employees and it was 14 unnecessary for the employer to adequately represent the individual employees’ interests 15 in the first litigation. Id. No such “liability escape hatches” existed in K.H. I. If the 16 individually named defendants negligently inflicted harm upon Plaintiffs through their 17 failure to prevent D.H.’s abuse, then Olympia School District was necessarily liable 18 under a theory of respondeat superior. Accordingly, the Court finds that the added parties 19 were in privity with Olympia School District in K.H. I and are sufficiently identical for 20 the purpose of res judicata.

21 Additionally, the Court notes that “the employer-employee relationship satisfies 22 the requirement of res judicata that the ‘quality’ of the persons against whom [Plaintiffs]

1 brought the claims must be identical, where the employer's liability is premised entirely 2 on the action of its employees." Brown, 98 Wn. App. at 364–65. Because the School
 3 District's liability in K.H. I was premised on the wrongful conduct of the present 4 individually named employees, the Court finds that the quality of the defendants is 5 identical.

6 3. Cause of Action

7 There is no precise test for determining whether causes of action share an identity.

8 See Rains v. State, 100 Wn.2d 660, 663–64 (1983). However, Washington courts have 9 considered the following criteria:

10 (1) Whether rights or interests established in the prior judgment would be 11 destroyed or impaired by prosecution of the second action; (2) whether 12 substantially the same evidence is presented in the two actions; (3) whether 13 the two suits involve infringement of the same right; and (4) whether the 14 two suits arise out of the same transactional nucleus of facts.

15 Hayes v. City of Seattle, 131 Wn.2d 706, 713 (1997) (quoting Rains, 100 Wn.2d at 664).

16 Plaintiffs argue that the current case involves the violation of constitutional rights 17 while the first case "[i]nvolved intentional tortious violation of sexual abuse." Dkt. 14 at 18. They also argue that their present complaint requires a showing of deliberate 19 indifference while their previous complaint only alleged conduct below the standard of 20 care that a reasonably prudent ordinary person would exercise. Id.

21 Pursuant to Washington law, "a matter may not be relitigated, or even litigated for 22 the first time, if it could have been raised, and in the exercise of reasonable diligence 23 should have been raised, in the prior proceeding." Bentil v. Univ. of Washington, 110 Wn.
 24 App. 1040 (2002) (quoting Kelly-Hansen v. Kelly-Hansen, 87 Wn. App. 320, 329

1 (1997)). In Migra v. Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 465 U.S. 75, 83–85 (1984), 2 the Supreme Court determined that the preclusive effect of a state-court judgment applies 3 to a § 1983 claim that could have been raised but was not in the earlier state-court 4 proceeding. “Section 1983 . . . does not override state preclusion law and guarantee [a 5 party] a right to proceed to judgment in state court on her state claims and then turn to 6 federal court for adjudication of her federal claims.” Id. at 85. Therefore, the state court 7 judgment in a case in which the Plaintiffs could have but did not raise their § 1983 claims 8 has the same preclusive effect here that such a judgment would have in state court. Id. at 9 84–85.

10 The present suit arises from the same transactional nucleus of facts as K.H. I.
11 Compare Dkt. 13-1 with Dkt. 1. Although the present complaint provides greater details 12 regarding Defendants’ misconduct, it is the same misconduct that was more vaguely 13 asserted in the original complaint. Id. Both complaints allege that Plaintiffs were wronged 14 by the gross misconduct of Defendants in allowing a dangerous predator to molest D.H.
15 and other vulnerable children on school buses. That the standard necessary to support 16 Plaintiffs’ first theory of negligence was easier to satisfy than their current theories does 17 not change the reality that both complaints allege the same set of facts, point their fingers 18 at the same bad actors, and rely upon substantially the same evidence. Ultimately, with 19 the exercise of any reasonable diligence, both Plaintiffs’ prior and present theories could 20 and should have been raised in the first case against all the currently named parties. The 21 Court therefore finds that the causes of action are identical.

1 4. Subject Matter

2 Although Washington lacks a well-defined rule for determining when subject 3 matter differs for purposes of res judicata, “the critical factors seem to be the nature of 4 the claim or cause of action and the nature of the parties.” Hayes, 131 Wn.2d at 712–13 5 (quoting Philip A. Trautman, Claim and Issue Preclusion in Civil Litigation in 6 Washington, 60 Wash. L. Rev. 805, 812-13 (1985)). “[T]he same subject matter is not 7 necessarily implicated in cases involving the same facts.” Mellor v. Chamberlin, 100 8 Wn.2d 643, 646 (1983). In the present action and K.H. I, both complaints seek a 9 monetary remedy for the allegedly tortious failure of Olympia School District employees 10 to adequately protect D.H. from a sexual predator. While the legal theories advanced in 11 the two cases are different, the “nature” of the claims and parties is the same.

12 E. Attorney’s Fees

13 Defendants request attorney’s fees pursuant to RCW 4.84.185, whereby the Court 14 may award attorney’s fees when a lawsuit is “frivolous and advanced without reasonable 15 cause.” “A lawsuit is frivolous when it cannot be supported by any rational argument on 16 the law or facts.” Tiger Oil Corp. v. Dep’t of Licensing, 88 Wn. App. 925, 938 (1997).
 17 Plaintiffs’ theory that the K.H. I judgment does not bar a § 1983 suit against Olympia 18 School District’s individual employees in their individual capacity was not frivolous, 19 irrational, nor even unreasonable. The Court refuses to award attorney’s fees.

20 F. Request for Stay

21 Plaintiffs have argued that, if the K.H. I judgment is res judicata, the proper 22 remedy is to stay this proceeding pending the K.H. I appeal. However, as addressed

1 above, “a judgment . . . becomes final for res judicata purposes at the beginning, not the 2 end, of the appellate process, although res judicata can still be defeated by later rulings on 3 appeal.” Lejeune, 64 Wn. App. at 266. If the res judicata effect of the K.H. I judgment 4 may be defeated on appeal, the Court need not stay the proceedings, as Defendants may 5 simply file anew or amend their K.H. I pleadings after the K.H. I judgment is defeated.
 6 Moreover, even if the appeal is granted, Plaintiffs would still need to overcome any 7 potential implications of the abstention doctrine in their maintenance of concurrent 8 federal and state court actions. See Sprint Commc’ns, Inc. v. Jacobs, 134 S. Ct. 584 9 (2013); Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. U. S., 424 U.S. 800 (1976). Also, if 10 the information supporting Plaintiffs’ § 1983 claims were somehow unattainable prior to 11 the K.H. I judgment, as Plaintiffs’ counsel claims (Dkt. 14 at 14), it appears Plaintiffs’ 12 more appropriate avenue for relief would lie in the procedures outlined in CR 60 and 13 RAP 7.2(e) of the Washington State Court Rules.

14 III. ORDER

15 Therefore, it is hereby ORDERED that Defendants’ motion to dismiss (Dkt. 12) is 16 GRANTED and Plaintiffs’ claims are DISMISSED. The Clerk shall close this case.

17 Dated this 7th day of October, 2016.
